

This shows an Eclipse session where a JS source file declares a second var statement within a function. Subject to configuration, JSLint advises you not to do this. You can see that as soon as the file is saved the console panel becomes focused and an error is reported in red.

Please note that this is not an Eclipse specific feature and that any invocation of the process-sources phase will invoke the JSLint check.